Use of cookies and tracking data

The Service uses technologies to track visits (cookies, local storage, etc.). This monitoring aims to:

- keep the connection of a user of the Service as part of a secure access
- anonymously measures the audience for the exclusive purposes of monitoring performance and improving the Service
- memorize the display of information or alert messages
- save consent preferences

Apart from the functionalities ensuring the proper functioning of the Service or its improvement, you can consent or not to the tracking of your visits and the use of your navigation data. This choice is given to you by a form on your first visit, and you can change your decision at any time. The retention period of your consent does not exceed 13 months.

Recipient and use of personal data

The recipient of the personal data collected is the Publisher and the service providers explicitly designated to support it in the processing of this data, and are therefore the only operators.

However, this data may be accessible by other service providers or intermediaries, in particular the Host, in the context of storage, backup and transmission. In this context, they may need to be accessible by companies and organizations outside the European Union.

Processing of personal data

The personal data collected by the Service is intended for the implementation of the main or secondary functionalities explained, in particular authentication, exchanges between the user and the Publisher or other users of the Service, access information about him, etc.

By validating the forms on the Service, you consent to the use which is made of the data explicitly collected as described in this document, on the forms or naturally arising from said forms.

Audience measurement - The data used for audience measurement is intended for the Publisher and its partners designated in the operation for the purpose of improving the Service. They consist of navigation, broad geolocation, provenance, profile and material information and are kept for a maximum period of 14 months.

Contact - The Service allows a visitor to contact the Publisher. The data thus collected make it possible to better identify the request to improve responses and are used by the Publisher only or service providers acting on his request to carry out the same action.

Account creation - The registration of a visitor to the Service requires the collection of data allowing authentication with the Service or qualification with the Publisher. These data are used by the Publisher or service providers acting on its request to provide the service described in the registration process.

The Service makes it possible to fill in the product information and the reference of a prospect or customer resulting from the use of a configurator to allow the Publisher or its designated partners to assess the interest, contact the user or improve the products and services offered by Anest Iwata.
